

I have lived, studied, trained, or practiced medicine in Loma Linda for over four decades, serving in many leadership roles, and since 2006 as your City Councilman, and for 10 years as your Mayor.

The fact that you seldom think about the inner workings of the City is by design. I and my colleagues on the Council favor quiet competence:

- Enhancing traffic flow
- Renovating aging infrastructure
- Approving family-friendly new home construction
- Balancing consumer and business interests
- Muzzling or eliminating punishing bureaucracies
- Arranging efficient waste removal
- Protecting the natural beauty of our hills
- Attracting desirable businesses
- Housing homeless veterans
- Protecting private property from criminal damage
- Facilitating healthy built environments
- Cooperating with our world-class healthcare and educational institutions
- Advising regional transportation priorities
- Attracting cargo and passenger service to San Bernardino International Airport
- Partnering with surrounding communities, charities, congregations, and governments

What more could you want from local government? Beware candidates who propose a more forceful, overreaching, or annoying City government. Run away from candidates who might sacrifice public safety to advance questionable political agendas. With cities as well-run as Loma Linda, needless changes more than likely will make things worse. If you agree with my prescription for Loma Linda, please vote Rigsby.
